3 Paragraph Essay:
Was the American Revolution Inevitable?

Throughout the course of human history, many revolutions have occurred. Some of these revolutions occur because people want liberty. An example of this would be the American Revolution. It is indeed a fact that the American Revolution brought more liberty for the American colonists. However, some question whether it was inevitable or not. The American Revolution of April 19th, 1775 to September 3rd, 1783 in eastern North America between the American colonists and the British imperialists was inevitable because the founders of the land were very individualistic people, the Americans didn't want the British profiting off of them through taxes such as the Stamp Act, and the Americans craved representation in Parliament which the British would not allow.

For one, the first inhabitants of the land of the American colonies were very individualistic people. When those newcomers came and founded the land, they tended to be self-motivated, independent individuals, such as Christopher Columbus. Also, the American colonists repudiated the idea of their British masters taxing them without representation for profit. An example of this would be the Stamp Act of 1765 which was a direct tax imposed by the British Parliament without the consent of the American colonists, on the American colonists. And, the American colonists desired political representation in the British Parliament but they were never granted that power. This act of ignoring those you rule didn't play out too well for the British imperialists.

Now, in conclusion, it is very clear whether or not The American Revolution of April 19th, 1775 to September 3rd, 1783 in eastern North America between the American colonists and the British imperialists was inevitable. It was indeed inevitable because the founders of the land were very individualistic people, the Americans didn't want the British profiting off of them through taxes such as the Stamp Act, and the Americans craved representation in Parliament which the British would not allow. The American Revolution was inevitable and there was only a matter of time before it occurred.
